

Figure 492: Defining chart colors

AutoCorrect functions

Some people find some of the options in Calc's AutoCorrect function annoying because they change what you type when you do not want it changed. Many people find some of the AutoCorrect functions quite helpful; if you do, then select the relevant options. But if you find unexplained changes appearing in your document, this is a good place to look to find the cause.

To open the AutoCorrect dialog, click Tools > AutoCorrect Options on the Menu bar. You need to have a document open for this menu item to appear.

In Calc, this dialog has four tabs, as shown in Figure 493. Options are described in the Help; many will be familiar to users of other office suites.